HELP PAGE - DOCUMENTS

All the indices and articles on this disk use the "Amigaguide" or "Multiview" program to send the text to screen. In nearly all cases, the text will not fit into the window that is opened. I have put an indicator which reads:-

=== End of Text ===

at the end of each article so that you can be sure that you have reached the end.

There are about 73 documents (all separate disk files) in this set of articles (not including the various supplementary text files).

Most of the documents have a menu and/or highlighted text that will take you into the various NODES of the document. A node is what you reach when you click on some highlighted text. The window will NOT display the whole document (unless, as is the case for a few of the documents, the document only has one node!). It will only display the contents of the node currently being read.

Don't forget that wherever you see some text highlighted like this anywhere in any of the indices or articles you can read more information by clicking on the highlighted text.

In the index files this will let you read the article you are pointing to.

In the articles this might:-

- take you to another part of the document you are reading,
- take you to another document,
- let you read explanations from the glossary.
