

The transition from Type I to Type II migration

Again look at a different version of this simulation, in which a graph is traced of the distance of the planet from its star (the 'primary'). Note from the flattening of the graph how the rate of migration falls as the gap opens, and Type II migration is established.