Do you have a Mac II? Tired of having MacPaint, FullPaint or MacWrite documents that can't be opened by double clicking on them?

Since MacPaint, FullPaint and MacWrite do not work on the Mac II, it can be annoying to have to open Microsoft Word or SuperPaint to access these documents. The programs included with this document will cause documents intended for one program to open another. There are three applications included, each is described below.
Use of these applications requires a small amount of customization with ResEdit.

MacWrite (?)

This application looks to the user and the Finder like the real thing. The finder will use it to launch MacWrite documents. What it really does is to launch Microsoft Word and open the selected MacWrite document. The document will open as Untitled.

MacPaint (?)

This application launches MacPaint files to SuperPaint.

FullPaint (?)

This application launches FullPaint files to SuperPaint.

Setup:

In order to operate these programs need to know where the destination application is. To set this up, you need to use ResEdit.
Run ResEdit and open the program to configure. Open the 'STR ' resource numbered 256. You will see a sample pathname. Enter the pathname for your system. The pathname is the name of the volume and each of the folders where the real application sits. For example, if SuperPaint is in a folder named 'Graphics', which is in a folder named 'Paint', which is on a hard disk named hard disk, you would enter the following:

Hard Disk:Paint:Graphics:Paint:

(the colon on the end is necessary). Close this resource, and then the file, answering 'Yes' to the question about saving changes. Repeat this process for each of the files. That's it! Now when you double click on a MacWrite document, it will open up in Word.

Note: the document will open as 'Untitled', just like it would if you ran Word and then opened the document.
