

Editorial-continued

The final form it will take is still evolving as the giants of commerce and capital reshape the focus. Insiders debate the changes to come with poorly concealed anxiety. The elitism of the chosen few has given way to making money. Given the potential power for easy(?) Internet access, what we do has enormous implications for democratizing the net as an inclusive institution. There exists an obligation to protect with vigilance the rights of those not yet ready to go on-line!

Because vast numbers of people do not yet have substantial presence on the Internet does not negate their substantial interest. Those interests must not be diminished or finessed away during the coming gold rush!

THIS ISSUE:

We promised a big Windows Issue for issue two and couldn't deliver! Hard drive crashes, illness, electronic services out of commission and finally, bread and butter demands of work. It will all be here in the upcoming "many flavors of windows"

A Call to our Readers

We are actively looking for someone to take on the responsibility for shareware software review and evaluation!

There any number of public issues which directly affect computer users that should be of concern to all of us. This magazine was originally conceived to provide a voice for computer professionals. That offer still stands. Submissions are welcome.

Letters to the Editor :

I am delighted to report that we are beginning to receive comment from our readers. Some are formal letters and are private communications while others would make fine reading for everyone. They cover the waterfront from technical recommendations about ACROBAT to suggestions of content. Those who take the time to write long critiques please let us know that you don't object to our publishing it and tag the document as a Letter To The Editor:

Subscriptions:

As a shareware publication we have not yet pushed for subscriptions. The practicalities of putting out a magazine are going to have to be addressed. I'd like some feedback on issues of advertising and sponsorships covering both individuals, institutions, and corporations. We need some input from those of you who trouble to read us.

Financial support helps defray some of the on going costs and is a singular act of supporting our efforts. Issues of quality and impartiality has been noted by more than one developer and vendor. We are all aware that independent voices are few!

Pictures, Graphics and Sound!

We are trying be sensitive to the size of files for download. Most of our readers pick up the magazine at the various ftp and mirror sites. The authoring tools create either fat viewers or fat compiled executables. Folks who write to us want we don't use more pictures, graphs or sound clips. The added file size is enormous.

Magazine Content:

Those of you who feel we are missing important content areas please let us know what you feel is missing here?
