

The intensity of the fighting during Citadel presented considerable logistical difficulties for the Germans. The success of the operation relied heavily upon a constant stream of supplies to the front. As the Luftwaffe began to lose their command of the air, Soviet attack aircraft were able to prey upon the "soft-skinned" supply trucks that the German assault desperately needed.

II-2 "Sturmovik"

You will start this mission with a single wingman, flying south along a suspected Fascist supply corridor. All truck convoys encountered must be completely destroyed. If refueling or rearming is necessary, return to your airbase across the river north-northeast of your starting position.