

Working in a Group and Being with People:

Working with other students in a group means I have to:
Keep my body, mind, and words in the group.

1. Move my body to join the group.
2. Share my ideas with the group, but don't expect them to accept them.
3. Acknowledge that other people have good ideas.
4. Agree to do PART of the work, but not ALL or NONE of it.
5. Make sure I do what I say I am going to do once I leave the group!
6. Allow for some time where people goof off in the group, this is called "networking."
7. Ask for clarification if I am confused about the assignment or about what other people are planning to do.
8. Get other people's email or phone number to contact them about the project from home.
9. Realize that most participants are feeling the project is a bit of a pain, even if they don't show it. Group work is complicated. Few people think it is truly fun. But they think, "when I have lemons, make lemonade".
10. Look forward to feeling good once the project is done and I have worked well with a team of people.

Starters for Working in a GROUP:

Working with other students in the group means I have to:
Keep my body, mind and words in the group!

1. Move my body to join the group!
2. Share my ideas with the group, but don't expect them to accept them.
3. Acknowledge that other people have good ideas too.
4. Agree to do PART of the work, but not ALL of it or NONE of it.