2016 RCNA CONVENTION MEDAL

In keeping with the 2016 Convention's theme "Celebrating Canada's Military Heritage," the medal commemorates the centennial of the Battle of the Somme, by portraying a portion of Canada's National War Memorial, which depicts soldiers of the First World War. A massive British and French offensive against German lines in northeastern France in the summer and fall of 1916, the Battle of the Somme was, at the time, one of the bloodiest battles in history. Tragically, it accomplished little.

Canadian troops, under the command of British generals, were stationed in Belgium, near Ypres. They were brought into the Battle of the Somme on August 30 and participated in many bloody attacks over the next three months. The Canadians acquitted themselves well, capturing a series of strategic objectives, but these were achieved at great cost.

Winter finally brought the Battle of the Somme to an end in mid-November. Allied casualties were about 624,000, including more than 24,700 Canadians and Newfoundlanders. The Germans suffered losses of about 660,000. The Allies' gain for five months of brutal fighting was a penetration into German-occupied territory of about 13 km along a 35 km front.
