

Conflict Test - Page 3 of 4

Click OK to continue the test. Conflict Catcher will now start the computer with a selected mix of startup files. See if your problem exists, and restart the computer to tell Conflict Catcher whether the problem exists or not.

Continue this process, and Conflict Catcher will identify a startup file that is part of your problem. If you choose to continue testing (and you should), Conflict Catcher will determine if there's another startup file that is also part of the problem, or if you have found the whole problem.

When you have isolated the problem, Conflict Catcher ask if you want to disable the startup files.
