

Free fall

The force of gravity produces a uniform vertical acceleration when objects fall freely near the Earth's surface.

The graphs below show how the displacement, velocity and acceleration of a falling object change with time. The effects of air resistance are not included.