

Kinetic energy

An object in motion - such as a speeding bullet, a moving car, or a charging rhino - has kinetic energy. This energy can be converted into other forms. A rhino uses his kinetic energy to defend his territory!

You can calculate the kinetic energy of a mass m moving at velocity v from the formula:

$$E_k = \frac{1}{2}mv^2$$