

The September 1938 issue of PRIVATE DETECTIVE STORIES featured "Dumb and Bald-Headed" by prolific author E. Hoffmann Price. Price was not only a frequent contributor to almost every genre of pulp magazine, he corresponded with and became friends with a number of his fellow writers. While Price's autobiography has, sadly, never been published, he did write a regular column for the magazine WITCHCRAFT AND SORCERY between 1971 and 1974, in which he discussed his days in the pulps and such well-known pulp authors as Jack Williamson and Ralph Milne Farley.