

The spicy titles often published two versions of the same issue, one with a star on the front cover and one without. The issue with the star was a censored version, with text slightly different and illustrations modified so as to not show bare breasts. At some point, however, probably in 1938, it appears that this practice was dropped, and thereafter, only one version of each issue was published, which issue featured a star on the cover.