

The comparison of a picture's compressed size on disk to its uncompressed size in memory.

For example, a picture file having an uncompressed size of 100K and a compressed size of 20K has a compression ratio of 20 percent.