

The spine of the scapula projects horizontally from the upper dorsal surface of the body of scapula. It begins as a small flat area on the medial border of the scapula opposite the spinous process of T3 and runs laterally to the acromial angle. It is subcutaneous and readily palpable.