

A dermatome is the area of cutaneous distribution of a single spinal nerve; there is considerable overlap between adjacent dermatomes.

The third cervical spinal nerves are distributed to a band of skin over the back of the scalp, upper posterior and lower lateral aspects of the neck as low as the clavicles anteriorly, extending at this level from the midline to the tip of the shoulders.