

The supraclavicular nerves arise as a common trunk from the third and fourth cervical nerves to supply an area of skin from behind the angle of the mandible superiorly obliquely to the midline anteriorly as low as second rib and over the anterior, superior and posterior aspects of the shoulder.