

The lateral sacral crest is formed by a row of small tubercles representing the tips of the fused transverse processes. The crest lies lateral to the dorsal sacral foramina.

Multifidus attaches medially and erector spinae laterally to the upper three-quarters and gluteus maximus attaches to the lower quarter.