

The rudimentary transverse processes project laterally and slightly upwards from each side of the body of the first coccygeal vertebra; and may ascend to articulate or fuse with the inferior lateral angle of the sacrum.