

The second, third and fourth coccygeal vertebrae decrease in size from above downwards and are usually fused. They consist of rudimentary vertebral bodies; the second may show traces of pedicles and transverse processes. Levator ani is attached centrally and coccygeus is attached laterally to the pelvic surface of the coccygeal vertebrae.