

The superior lateral sacral artery arises from the posterior trunk of the internal iliac artery. It passes medially to enter the first or second ventral (anterior) sacral foramen, to supply the sacral vertebrae and the contents of the sacral canal. It exits the sacral canal via the first or second dorsal (posterior) sacral foramen to supply muscles and skin posterior to the sacrum.