

The anterior trunk of the internal iliac vein is a variable short trunk located at the superior margin of the greater sciatic foramen. It is formed by the union of the inferior gluteal, internal pudendal, obturator, middle rectal, and vesical veins, plus the uterine and vaginal veins in females and drains into the internal iliac vein.