

The medial sacral veins accompany their corresponding artery anterior to the sacrum. They unite to form a single trunk before draining into the left common iliac vein in the midline, just before the latter ends to form the inferior vena cava. Occasionally, the trunk may join the confluence of the two common iliac veins.