

The basilar part of the occipital bone extends antero-superiorly from the foramen magnum and fuses with the sphenoid bone. On the inferior surface, anterior to the foramen magnum, is the pharyngeal tubercle to which longus capitis attaches laterally. The superior surface forms part of the clivus, lateral to which are grooves for the inferior petrosal sinus.