

The superior articular processes project superiorly from the pediculo-laminar junctions and together with the inferior articular processes they form the palpable articular pillars on each side. These processes bear the superior articular facets and may also have a small functionless tubercle situated lateral to small pressure facets that are close to the superior facets.