

The transverse processes, which contain the foramina transversaria, project antero-laterally. They attach to the vertebral body and pediculo-laminar junction and terminate as anterior and posterior tubercles, which are joined by the concave costal lamella. The posterior tubercles are more rounded and situated more infero-laterally than the anterior tubercles.