

The posterior tubercles are rounded projections situated most laterally on the transverse process, and infero-laterally to the anterior tubercles, that represent the lateral ends of the embryonic transverse process. Situated on the inferior surface are the attachments of levator scapulae, splenius cervicis, longissimus cervicis and iliocostalis cervicis. Scalenus medius and posterior attach to the apex.