

The pedicles of the lumbar vertebrae are short, thick processes. They arise postero-laterally from the upper parts of the convex body and pass postero-laterally to the laminae. Each has shallow superior and deep inferior vertebral notches.