

The sacral canal (vertebral foramen) is triangular in shape and much wider transversely than it is antero-posteriorly. Anteriorly, it is enclosed by the posterior surface of the vertebral body and posteriorly by the laminae.

It contains the cauda equina, filum terminale and spinal meninges, spinal arteries and venous plexuses.