

The superior longitudinal band of the cruciform ligament is a strong median band of fibers passing from the superior border of the transverse band of the cruciform ligament (transverse ligament of the atlas) to the anterior margin of the foramen magnum. It is located between the membrana tectoria posteriorly and the apical ligament of the dens anteriorly.