

The superficial cervical vein accompanies its corresponding artery. It drains mainly the trapezius muscle and descends anteriorly across the floor of the posterior triangle anterior to the phrenic nerve and scalenus anterior to directly into the external jugular vein. At the mid-clavicular level it drains into the vertebral or deep cervical veins.