

The anterior and posterior radicular veins unite to form the intervertebral veins. They pass with the spinal nerves through the intervertebral foramina to drain the spinal cord and internal and external vertebral venous plexuses. They terminate, depending on the level, by joining the vertebral, posterior intercostal, lumbar and lateral sacral veins.