

The median furrow passes in the midline from the external occipital protuberance to the natal cleft, between the two erector spinae muscle masses.