

The cutaneous branches of the first, second and third lumbar dorsal rami supply the skin of the back from the midline posteriorly over the upper gluteal region as far laterally as the greater trochanter.