

The medial branches of the pelvic sympathetic trunk are small branches from the first two ganglia. They give off branches, which join with the inferior hypogastric (pelvic) plexus and branches, which form a plexus on the median sacral artery. The branches connect across the midline.