

The sacral hiatus is of practical importance. It gives access to the epidural space without being near the dura mater. It is, therefore, able to be used for epidural injections as used in anesthesia and analgesia.