DEFINITION OF SHAREWARE

Shareware distribution gives users a chance to try software before buying it. If you try a Shareware program and continue using it, you are expected to register. Individual programs differ on details -- some request registration while others require it, some specify a maximum trial period. With registration, you get anything from the simple right to continue using the software to an updated program with printed manual.

Copyright laws apply to both Shareware and commercial software, and the copyright holder retains all rights, with a few specific exceptions as stated below. Shareware authors are accomplished programmers, just like commercial authors, and the programs are of comparable quality. (In both cases, there are good programs and bad ones!) The main difference is in the method of distribution. The author specifically grants the right to copy and distribute the software, either to all and sundry or to a specific group. For example, some authors require written permission before a commercial disk vendor may copy their Shareware.

Shareware is a distribution method, not a type of software. You should find software that suits your needs and pocketbook, whether it's commercial or Shareware. The Shareware system makes fitting your needs easier, because you can try before you buy. And because the overhead is low, prices are low also. Shareware has the ultimate money-back guarantee -- if you don't use the product, you don't pay for it.

DISCLAIMER - AGREEMENT

Users of WinFlash 2.0 must accept this disclaimer of warranty: WinFlash 2.0 is supplied as is. The author disclaims all warranties, expressed or implied, including, without limitation, the warranties of merchantability and of fitness for any purpose. The author assumes no liability for damages, direct or consequential, which may result from the use of WinFlash 2.0.

WinFlash 2.0 is a "shareware program" and is provided at no charge to the user for evaluation. Feel free to share it with your friends, but please give them the original FLASH-20.ZIP (or FLASH.ZIP if obtained originally from CompuServe) file so that they will have all of the necessary support files. The essence of "user-supported" software is to provide personal computer users with quality software without high prices, and yet to provide incentive for programmers to continue to develop new products. If you find this program useful and continue to use WinFlash 2.0 after the 30-day trial period, you must make a registration payment of $15.00 to Open Windows. The $15.00 registration fee will license one copy for use on any one computer at any one time. You must treat this software just like a book. An example is that this software may be used by any number of people and may be freely installed on multiple computers, so long as there is no possibility of it being used at one location while it's being used at another - just as a book cannot be read by two different persons at the same time.

Commercial users of WinFlash 2.0 must register and pay for their copies of WinFlash 2.0 within 30 days of first use or their license is withdrawn. Site-License arrangements may be made by contacting Open Windows.

Anyone distributing WinFlash 2.0 for a fee of any kind must read the conditions in the VENDOR.TXT file distributed with this application.
