

To be going to, followed by the infinitive, expresses a notion of foreseeable future, an intention or a conviction.

- The notions of intention and immediate future are expressed more clearly by to be going to than by will.

Example:

I'm at the station. Are you going to collect me?

Will you collect me from the station next

Tuesday?