

y John Haley

For a brief synopsis of what has happend here at Ambrosia over the last two months, you have come to the right place.

woop™ is going to lay waste to your keyboard the same way that Apeiron is destroying your mouse. The sinister creatures that inhabit David Wareing's mind will find their way to your Mac before April. You had better get a good nights sleep; for once the Swoopers have come there will be no rest. To find out more about this new game, see the chapter titled The Swoopers Are Coming.

Apeiron™ is a hit. Hey, we're not just boasting. The online services are burning up with comments. We have posted a select few in this month's newsletter, check out the Kudos & Criticisms chapter.

CompuServe™ is the latest international commercial online service to offer Ambrosia it's own plot of ground. A forum of our own allows us to better serve users linked to that service. Next step the Internet.

Ambrosia Welcomes Gayle Haarr to the Ambrosia home team. Gayle signed on as Ambrosia's office manager.

With her financial know-how, Ambrosia will be able to better squeeze every last breath out of your shareware dollar, and throw it right back at you in the form of new software and improved services.

Easter Eggs abound. There are a few cheat codes for Apeiron, so we have scattered them through the newsletter. Some are attached to pictures or words, but the majority are hidden behind white space. If there is anything left of your mouse after playing Apeiron, use it to click around and see what you find. Good hunting!