Windows 2000 Installer (MSI) technology provides a large number of command line switches. Advanced users and administrators should visit Microsoft.com to obtain the full MSI documentation which includes command line switches and other aspects of MSI.

The following list details the most common command line switches you can use:

Switches	Description
/a	Performs an administration network installation.
	Examples:
	setup /a msiexec /a setup.msi
/q	Quiet installation- Installs a "Typical" installation of the product and does not display a user interface.
	Examples:
	setup /q
	msiexec /q setup.msi
IGNOREOS=1	Override operating system requirements. Normally, iGrafx will not install on Windows 95 First Release and Windows NT 3.51. This command line switch overrides this restriction allowing installations on operating systems iGrafx does not support. This switch must be ALL CAPS and does NOT use a leading backslash (/). The installer must be run from the command line.
	Example:
	msiexec / i setup.msi IGNOREOS=1

Common Command Line Switches

Administrative Point Command Line Switches

Switches	Description
/i	Install application. If an administrator wishes to launch a client install using Windows NT "AT" command or some other means requiring a command line, SETUP.MSI can be launched.
	Examples:
	msiexec /i setup.msi
	msiexec /i /q setup.msi (Silent install)
REBOOT="Suppress"	Prevents reboot at the end of installation. This is useful for administrators installing multiple applications in one pass. This command switch does not use a leading backslash (/), must be all CAPS, and "Suppress" must be in quotes.
	Example:
	msiexec /i setup.msi REBOOT="Suppress"

Network Source Installation Command Line Switches

Switches	Description
ADDSOURCE="ALL"	Network Source installation. This command switch does not use a leading backslash (/), must be all CAPS, and "ALL" must be in quotes.
	Example:
	msiexec /i setup.msi ADDSOURCE= "ALL"
