When the international counter-terrorism organisation was established in the UN, she joined as the US representative, and assumed command of the organisation.

Although she is usually a reserved and quiet woman, she can promptly analyze any situation and quickly issue instructions regarding the necessary response. She frequently disagrees with her current assistant, Deputy Commander Eric and she is extremely concerned about the formation of two separate factions within the organisation.

In principle, she believes that human life must take priority in any mission. She does not have any children.

Radar Operator

Name: Billy MacGuire
Nationality: French
Age: 26
Height: 181 cm

Because his father was a computer engineer, he loved playing with machinery since he was a child.

After graduation, he was seconded to NATO forces and took up duties as a radar operator. He has a deep knowledge of computers, and his abilities were highly valued for this mission; he was entrusted with the operational duties in the Blue Harvest radar room.

MacGuire seems to behave roughly, and sometimes other people around him suffer through his impudent actions. When drunk, he often badmouths people, breaks things and behaves violently. In the end, though, he always ends up in tears. However, he is a good guy when he is not drunk, and somehow manages to be well liked by his colleagues.

Terrorist Leader

Age: 45
Height: 188 cm

Zugoski volunteered for military service after leaving high school, and worked his way up to the intelligence corps. After joining the KGB, Zugoski served as a special agent overseas, in order to investigate and acquire military weapons throughout the world.

Over zealous, he loved his home country so much that he exceeded his brief more than once or twice. Each time his superiors had to resign, and he would be transferred. The KGB kept him employed because they were afraid of what would happen if he were working for someone else.

However, after the collapse of the Soviet Union, he turned completely and became well known as a merchant of death; providing weapons to regional insurgents. He will do anything for a successful result, and seeks profit everywhere. Zugoski is somewhat self-indulgent and loves to show off.

A member of 'The Knights of the Apocalypse' terrorist group. Mikhalkov assisted many times in KGB assassinations during the Soviet period. He was active overseas behind the scenes as Boris' right-hand man immediately before the fall of the Soviet Union. His assassination techniques were well known within the KGB, and he was feared even among his colleagues.

Despite his brutal appearance, he prefers well-planned and precise assassinations - his crossbow skills are equaled by none. Maybe due to this, he is supremely confident and is always proud to be in the forefront of any fight.

Terrorist Gang Lieutenant B

Name: Vincent Rossa
Nationality: Colombian
Weapon: Flamethrower
Age: 36
Height: 178 cm

A member of 'The Knights of the Apocalypse' terrorist group. Part of Rossa's youth was spent in a weapon-smuggling cartel, and this is where he learned how to handle weapons. After that he wandered the globe from one conflict to another as a mercenary, and this is his first taste of terrorist activity. He is very short-tempered, and because his method of killing is so crude, even other killers dislike him. He especially favours killing by flame-thrower, and his nickname is 'Talking Napalm'.

Terrorist Gang Lieutenant C.

Name: Nikita Andropov
Nationality: Russian (?)
Weapon: Railgun
Age: ?
Height: 207 cm

Nikita Andropov comes from the old Soviet Army. He was demoted further and further downwards for repeatedly assaulting his superiors, and when he left the army due to drug-dealing within his squad, his skills earned him a place in Boris' private command where he took on the role of Boris' bodyguard.

His character is as you may imagine, quite violent, and he enjoys massed gun battles very much.
