Writer/Director Hal Hartley takes a humorous and satirical look at a society concerned only with instant gratification and voyeuristic sensationalism. Disgusted with human evolution, a foul-mouthed monster (Robert Burke) kills anyone who crosses his path. When a news crew sent to investigate the monster disappears, a guileless young journalist (Sarah Polley) is dispatched to follow up on the story. She befriends the monster, and eventually becomes his only hope in ending his life of misery.
