

Sheet1

WORD,C,16

binoculars

hydroelectric

horsepower

graft

installments

dismantle

deadlocked

nondescript

comatose

antecedent

mishap

centipede

compromise

surplus

balance

urbane

superannuatec

televise

sublunary

intravenous

Sheet1

DEFINITION,C,250

a hand-held instrument for seeing at a distance that consists of two telescopes, a focusing device, and usually prisms of or relating to the production of electricity by waterpower

a unit of power equal in the U.S. to 746 watts and nearly equal to the English unit of the same name that equals 550 foot-pou the getting of money or advantage through misuse of an official position the parts into which a debt is divided when payment is little by little over a period of time; one of several parts (as of a publica to take to pieces, to take apart; to strip of furniture and equipment stopped in action because both sides in a struggle are equally powerful and neither will give in belonging or appearing to belong to no particular class or kind: not easily described of, resembling or affected with a sleeplike state of unconsciousness caused by disease, injury, or poison coming earlier in time or order bad luck; an unfortunate accident any of a class of long flattened arthropods that have many segments with each segment having one pair of legs except for the a settlement of a dispute by each party giving up some demands the amount more than what is required or necessary; an excess of income over spending the amount by which one side of an account is greater than the other very polite and smooth in manner too old for work or use to pick up and usually broadcast by television of, relating to, or characteristic of the terrestrial world being within or entering by way of the veins

Sheet1

SENTENCE,C,80

The scout peered through his @, hoping to get a glimpse of the distant fort.
The town discussed building a @ plant, to harness the power of the river.
The power of a car is usually measured in terms of @.
Coolidge cleared Washington of @ and other corrupt ways of using power.
A good investment is one in which the value lasts longer than the @.
The order came to @ the camp, and move it to another location.
The two Democratic factions were @, neither candidate winning the nomination.
He was rather @ in appearance, wearing a gray suit and black shoes.
The patients in the ward lay @, and the staff struggled to revive them.
@ to their arrival at the party, they stopped at their parents' for an visit.
An annoying @ caused him to fall into the gutter, and ruin his pants.
The @ crawled over the glass, and they shuddered at its legs and jointed body.
The party reached a @ by not choosing either of the original candidates.
The @ left over after the bills were paid went into a savings account.
The @ on the debt that remained to be paid was $400.
One of the Democratic candidates was an @ northerner opposed to Prohibition.
The typewriter was @ by the newer models, and deserved to be in a museum.
They debated whether to @ the whole convention, or only part of it.
The invention of the rocket meant that we were not limited to @ travel any more.
The doctors prepared an @ antibiotic, to be fed constantly into her blood.