

Sheet1

WORD,C,16
growth
foreign enthusiasm
neither sovereign
monarchy
wholesome
wrench
loathe
drench
famished
fickle
wreak
merchandise
swarm parched
span burnish
charitable overwhelm

Sheet1

DEFINITION,C,250

a result or product of growing located outside a place or country and especially outside one's own country strong excitement and active interest not the one and not the other supreme in power or authority total rule by one person; a form of government having a chief of state who inherits the position, rules for life, and holds power helping to keep or improve the sound condition of mind or body a violent twisting or pulling to feel extreme disgust for wet thoroughly

starving; suffering from a lack of something necessary likely to change frequently without good reason to bring down in or as if in punishment

the goods that are bought or sold in trade

a large number grouped together and usually in motion toasted by dry heat; wilted with heat the distance from the end of the thumb to the end of the little finger of a spread hand; also: an English unit of length equal to 9 to make shiny especially by rubbing: polish freely giving money or help to poor and needy persons: generous; given to the needy: of service to the needy; kindly in judging to cover over completely: submerge; to completely overcome: crush

Sheet1

SENTENCE,C,80

The sides of the house were covered with a thick @ of ivy.

The exchange students spoke with each other in a @ language.

Americans now celebrated the fourth of July with @ and excitement.

@ friend nor foe was able to move the young man from his resolve.

After the war of 1812, it was clear that America was @ and firmly independent.

The American colonists had enough of @, and wanted a new kind of government.

The hungry workmen sat down to a @ meal of baked chicken, carrots and potatoes.

The policeman struggled to @ the weapon out of his attacker's hand.

Try as hard as he might, James could do nothing but @ the wretched creature.

The riotous children proceeded to @ each other with bucketfuls of water.

Exhausted and @, the hikers practically threw themselves at the laden table.

We are expecting sunshine, but the weather is always @, and not to be trusted.

He watched the tornado travel down the valley and @ havoc in its wake.

The travelling salesman spread his @ before the assembled crowd.

The country began to prepare for the @ of new settlers.

His throat was @ by the hot sun, and he looked forward to a cool glass of water.

In a very brief @ of time, the population doubled.

The butler was sent to @ the candlesticks until they glistened in the light.

The old priest was kind and @, ready to help anyone in need.

In a voice calculated to @, the lawyer continued his questioning.