

A Word From Windham Hill...

This month we feature one spectacular new release plus one we've had on NAUTILUS before... but this time we're presenting it in an exciting new way.

First, we highly recommend "The Impressionists, a new Windham Hill Sampler, "the music of a specific time and place -- France, in the late 19th century" captured in evocative fashion by a wide range of fine artists. The featured full-length cut is the hauntingly familiar Pavane by Gabriel Faure, performed by guitarist Steve Erquiaga.

The second offering is our first music video! Be sure to take a look at steel drummer Andy Narell's pulsating "We Kinda Music" from the Windham Hill Jazz release, "Commotion 2."

It's great to make such fine recordings available to NAUTILUS subscribers, and the fact that they're brand new -- or present uniquely -- makes their inclusion here even more exciting.

We are pleased to make both releases featured this issue available for purchase. For your convenience we offer both CDs and cassettes, and with each order we'll include a free sampler cassette.

Windham Hill continues to selectively evolve, nurturing the relationship it has developed with its customers.
