

DELTA FORCE COMMAND CENTER

Last Mission Analysis Briefing and Next Mission Order

November 30, 1999

Situation:

After analysis of the data found in the laptop computer you brought back from the camp in Quebec, and after interviewing the hostages, it appears that a international criminal organisation is kidnapping prominent hackers and other computer specialists in order to penetrate computer systems, and create or re-create Y2K problems in already patches systems. This could lead to a world-wide mayhem that nobody can afford.

The camp you have found was a stage camp. We are in fact lucky that the computer specialists were not already taken out of Canada using the Cessna plane that was on the field.

We can probably attribute that luck to the fact that they were not expecting us. We caught them unprepared for our visit. This was the first time, and probably the last one too.

Some preliminary data found in the laptop seems to give various position for an other staging area in western USA. Several teams will be dispatched to check those position.

Your particular orders will send you to Colorado. You are to investigate one of the most plausible location. Alpha team will be with you on that one. We expect that by now, they are aware that we are on their tracks. This will be a day-time mission, and the weather is predicted to be nice.

The investigated area is located in a rocky/sandy valley, so bring long range equipment. Expected opposition is about 15 to 20 personnel.

Delta Force Command Center.
End of Mission Order.