To display a different Image Integrator library in the current Image Integrator palette, select the Open… item from the Image Integrator palette's File menu. Use the dialog that appears to choose the new library to be viewed. When the OK button is clicked, the new library information replaces the previous library's display in the palette. If there is a need to display a second Image Integrator library in a second palette, open the library by choosing Open Image Integrator… from the QuarkXPress Utilities menu instead.