Microsoft Windows along with a wide assortment of increasingly capable word processors, spread sheets, drawing and presentation programs currently give the computer user the ability to easily create a professional quality document or presentation from a desktop. Plotting capability is provided so that the users data can be effectively presented and a wide variety of clip art is usually included with these applications so that professional appearing art can be easily incorporated without the requirement that the user be a talented artist.

This predrawn clip art is generally adequate to provide borders or icons or other non-specific illustrations. If the subject of the users document requires that a particular country or region of the earth be illustrated, and the desired view is not available as clip art, there is no easy way to generate it. This is the need filled by ClpMap. ClpMap allows the user to easily generate an accurate map of the whole earth or any specific part of the earth from any particular vantage point and with a wide variety of selectable parameters. If a particular country or region is needed as the base art on which to add annotations or other figures for a complete illustration, ClpMap provides the user an easy way to generate it.
