

The north transept of the fifth-century C.E. church contains wonderful mosaic representations of birds and animals. The detail depicts a heron and an asp in deadly combat. Lotus plants are also identifiable in the background.