

About one mile north of Acre stands this aqueduct on arches built by the Ottoman governor Suleiman Pasha, who began his rule in 1804. Though it looks Roman, the aqueduct has modern mortar. It is eight miles long and brings water to the city from the springs of Kabri to the north.