

This bone pendant is a typical depiction of Bes, the Egyptian god who protects pregnant women. It was expertly carved with feathered headdress, beard, prominent nose and extended tongue. This figure of Bes was the central ornament of a necklace that may well have adorned a young pregnant woman in Iron Age Dor.

For a Bes figurine found at Megiddo, see Slide 29.